Radiology in Sweden

The radiology departments in Sweden have a standard above average European conditions. Examinations are performed using modern equipment and standard modalities are CT, US, MRI (both 1 and 3 Tesla) and in an increasing number of bigger hospitals also PET-scan. The competence within the field is generally very high which enables rich opportunities for development in your profession. Some of the most significant radiologists originates from Sweden and interesting science has been produced here.

Mostly RIS and PACS are digitalised and the work is often organised so that the doctors are specialised within organs in the bigger hospitals, and nurses are organised within modalities. Doctors and nurses work closely together and the general structure is flat and welcomes own initiatives and communication and close cooperation with clinicians!

Also the smaller hospitals are very well equipped, these clinics require a broad general competence.

There are opportunities to do research in the interest of the hospitals need. Often the hospitals are generous regarding education and training.

Working hours are regulated and allows you to live a rich and “normal” family life. You will be employed directly by the hospital, enjoying the same conditions and level of salary as your Swedish colleagues. Salaries for radiologists in Sweden are competitive.
